

Reimbursement Assistance Guide

Over 70% of attendees get reimbursed by their employers, and we can help you navigate the process. Human Resources typically owns the budget and administrative process for education reimbursement. They have an annual Learning and Development (L&D) allocation for every employee, typically between $750 and $2500 for US, Canada, and EU-based companies.

Once you enroll, you'll be emailed an invoice that you can submit as proof of payment. Some have specific formatting or information needed to qualify for reimbursement. You can email info@HighROI.AI.com to get a customized invoice.

At the end of the course, you'll receive a certificate of completion proving your accomplishment. It will have your name, the course name, the instructor's name, and the HROI Logo. You'll also get a digital certificate to put in your online profiles. Some companies require you to submit the certificate to be reimbursed.

At some businesses, employees must submit an authorization request to get their manager's approval. Including an email explaining the value you'll be capable of delivering to your employer is essential. Career advancement is important to you, but this email needs to feature the business's needs and how you'll be more capable of meeting them.

Everything starts with ROI. Add specific pain points and roadblocks your business or team is experiencing. This course will help you solve high-value problems, but choosing the elements most relevant to your situation is critical.

Here's a template to get you started. Feel free to contact info@HROIAI.com if you need help filling in specific details or making the case.

The course is designed for me to put what I learn into practice and get feedback from the instructor while I'm taking it. The course frameworks I learn will turn me into a multiplier because I can teach them and upskill the entire team.

The course is $1600. I've priced out alternatives, and it's one of the lowest-cost options available. Most other courses aren't customized for people in my role or taught by someone with the same background and depth of experience.

What do you think? Can you authorize the course?

Thank you!
